I find now that all the evangelical clurches—so-called again—so far as I know without exception, have at last put all their temperance eggs into the prohibition basket—and having thus committed themselves, it will not be easy for anyone to retrace its steps. They have all adopted the "big-stick." They have all adopted the "big-stick that will inevitable at one and financial requirements. indintrable foresight, the authors of this wonderful amendment differ net forget this numerous class without whose rotes prohibition laws could not be carried anywhere. The words "for sate" are the saving clause; on discovery of which every drinking man shouts. "Hooray! Prohibition isn't so had after all. I used to have to pay 15 cents for one little thimbleful of whisky, now all I have to do is to get a tinsmit to make a little stilling affair to go on my cook stove and then with a gallon or two of molasses and a few cakes of years! I can make all the tam and whisky I want, at a cost of not more than 10 cents a gallon. Hooray for prohibition?" And, true it is, that under prohibition all the drinking man has to do in order to get liquer of any kind is to set up a little wine, beer or spirit factory in his own kitchen. Then he can drink what he likes, when he likes, as often as he likes, and have his wife and children help him make the drinks and fon him in the drinking. Great improvement, isn't it, reader? Yes, it is as we used to say, "over the left". To my mind, nothing could be con-CONTINUED ON NEXT PAGE.

A Last Word

I am old enough to have had such large experience as to make me conservative, but I am young enough to be enthusiastic to accom-plish more and more in the future—for the benefit of suffering humanity mis conservative, but I am young enough to be enthusiastic to accomplish more and more in the future for the benefit of suffering humanity. For many years I have kept my eyes wide open, I have traveled, I have studied, I have burnt the milnight oil in the library and the laboratory. I have tried to advance a little in wisdom and knowledge every day in order that I might give my patients the best skill possible. I am yet traveling, yet learning. I do not know it all. Some crosuroads doctor may try to miske you think he is the wise man of the nation, but you know better.

All my professional life I have been studying how to cure, to cure where others fall, and above all, to cure to stay cured, and I have successfully demonstrated that my knowledge, acquired by many hours of hard work, is daily successfully curing many otherwise condemned to chronic invalidism.

Have I met with opposition? Plenty of it; meet it every day, some doctors—not the best men of the profession, but the narrow-minded bigots—will condemn me because I advertise and pay for my advertisements, and then they will resort to all sorts of tactics to get a free puff in the paper, lauding a skill they do not possess. Advertise? Most assuredly I do. Every doctor does in some way. I do it openly and without hypocrisy; some do it sneakingly and with the underhanded methods of the charlatan or quack.

It is enough for me to know that I have the gratitude of hundreds of old patients who long since received benefit at my hands, and this alone compensates for the idle talk and foolish antagonism of the narrow-minded bigot whose underhand and skulking hypercriticism and superficial and confined conceptions of the honest and conscientions physician's code of ethics will mystify and hoodwink no one.

Each patient here at my office receives skillful, expert and individual treatment. Consult a true Specialist, whom you know from his permanently and long established reputation is able to cure you permanently and quickly. Patients from a distance can return home same day.
